

Review of Forex Killer! Foreign Exchange (Forex) Systems

Last week our review of Forex Killer was based on the basic principles that govern this exciting industry. This week we will extend our discussion to Forex Systems and various other aspects of the Forex Killer industry as well a continued review of Forex Killer!

In the world of Forex market, like in most things really, there are only two different types. The Flexible and the Fixed . A Flexible Forex Market applies when it is the Central Bank who decides how much each currency is worth. This valuation is based on supply and demand and doesn't require the central bank to buy or sell currencies in order to maintain a stable market price.

The Fixed Forest Rate is my more rigid in that currencies are fixed to each other at a determined rate. The central bank then acts as buffer in order to maintain the market value of the currency.

So if the price of foreign currency increases, the Central Bank must sell that currency in order to avoid any price increase. Conversely, in the even that there is a decrease in the market currency value so will the Central Bank need to purchase additional currency in order to maintain a stable market price.

It is very much like a pendulum swinging from one side to another. Ideally, there should be no movement with the market value held in the middle. The Central Bank's responsibility is then to ensure that the swinging movement is reduced and brought back to the middle by either buying or selling some of its own currency stock.

How much is it all worth it then?

Or lots of them.. In fact way more than lots of them since the Forex market in the biggest market in the financial world and that's just not here but throughout the world. If you ever wondered why exchange and forex traders seemed to be rolling in it, it's because they really are!

Indeed we are taking about insane amounts of money here. So much so that you would need 12 zeros to the right of the number 2 to get a representation of what that market really is, and that would just be for a single day's trade!

This means that 2,000.000.000.000 USD are traded daily. Two trillion USD or two thousand million American Dollars! Talk about the potential of a Forex Killer Trader.

The Forex market is an over the counter market with no physical location, central exchange and or clearing houses. Indeed, all it is, is an electronic network of banks, corporations and individuals purchasing, "trading", currencies from one another. Open 24 hours a day, it is uniquely suited to both end of the business spectrum, namely corporate institutions and independent or at home traders.

Forex Traders or FX Traders as they are also known are in the business of buying and selling currencies from each other. The results of these transactions are then fed into these networked computers in order to be displayed on official quote screens.
