

The Great Pyramid and Freemasonry

The rise of Free Masonry as a political and cultural force commenced at the end of the 1900's. But what is very curious with regard to this episode in history is that it coincided with an acceleration of the imminent explosion of Egyptological studies which gained considerable momentum at that time.

The precise origin of Freemasonry and its entrance and import into the world, although highly shrouded by cranks and obsessives, was influential and played an extremely significant role in affecting not only the political world, but also the scientific, and caused remarkable changes in the cultural world as well.

During this remarkable time in history most major figures in history were either mason or influenced by Freemasonry and all masons were Egyptophiles. The Masons claimed that they drew their beginnings from Egypt and made these claims by pointing to Egyptian texts and an lineage dating to the Egyptian priesthood.

The Masons establishing the Egyptian temples as their lodges used the Egyptian symbols as the decorum on their walls; even using the hieroglyphs which were a highly misunderstood language. They also included phenomena such as the pyramid and the "all seeing eye" on the reverse seal of the U.S. dollar bill.

That Masonic Freemasonry flourished under the imperial rule of Napoleon is a matter of conspiratorial theory and record record, but it remains uncertain that he himself was a Mason. Nonetheless, Napoleon was know to use Masonic - Egyptian emblems in his protocols.

Napoleon determined that the time was ripe to launch the theory of Egyptophila on an unprecedented scale. He made his plans and set sail from the south of France to invade the ancient land of Egypt. This date became one of the most important in the history of the Great Pyramid.
