

Exclusive Secrets To Win Her Heart - Tips to Date Russian Women

Ever fallen in love at first sight with a Russian lady? Here are some valuable pieces of advice to help you in case you are planning on picking up a girlfriend who is Russian.

You may have spent hours dreaming of tennis player Anna Kournikova, or maybe you have discussed the charm of Maria Sharapova with your friends. These two women have something in common, besides playing tennis, they are all Russian.

Russian women are characterized with figures that are made for sports, killer blue eyes, and a great walk. If you watch television then you will notice that many women from the former Soviet Union are supermodels and are adored by designers. Another example of Russian celebrities that you may dream about are the fierce brunette Julia and the sprightly redhead Lena that make up the duet group Tatu. Not long ago they came to the United States and broke millions of hearts as men fawned over them. Do you dream of having such a gorgeous and lovely wife?

You need to realize that it may not be as important as what you want in a Russian woman, but what they want in you. First you should learn a few phrases in Russian. Most women in Russia do not speak English so you want to be able to carry on a conversation with her. The Russian language uses the Cyrillic alphabet which is totally different from the Latin versions of the same words. Russian words are pronounced with softness.

You may find it hard in the beginning, but if you work hard, your efforts will pay off. If you are looking to say hello in Russian then you would say "Zdrastvui" or "Privet". If you are looking to pay a woman a compliment then tell her "Tiy preekrahsnah vigneedeesh" which means "You look lovely". If you say it the right way, she will fall for you immediately.

The next best way to win over a Russian woman is by romancing her. Russian ladies are fond of all the little gestures which suggest that you adore them. They also reciprocate such gestures. They are more likely to knit a sweater for you rather than picking one from a store. So, the next time you pick her up for a date, be sure to get her a small gift which can be anything like a perfume or some flowers or any kind of hand-made stuff or even nice lingerie. Try to initiate such gestures wherever possible.

Last but not the least, make sure you are in touch with her constantly. It might sound like a very general tip, but pretending to be busy or hard to be with her will not be of much help. Russian women ask for your attention all through the day as they tend to divert their attention elsewhere if you do not give her the priority.

Telephone calls to Russia are not as expensive as they once were with all the great phone plans they have, so put it to good use and call her frequently. You can also use IP telephones which are becoming more and more popular. However you call her, make sure you do, and don't be turned off by the fact that she may be too busy at the time to chat, just call her again later!

Take your time to lay a good foundation for your relationship. Make your intentions very clear and let her know how serious you are about her. If done correctly, this could ensure that the rest of your life is spent happily.
